You're a Good Man Charlie Brown

Lucy shares her career goals with her unbelieving friends in this comedic monologue.

Lucy

Do you know what I intend? I intend to be a queen. When I grow up I'm going to be the biggest queen there ever was, and I'll live in a big palace and when I go out in my coach, all the people will wave and I will shout at them, and...and...In the summertime I will go to my summer palace and I'll wear my crown in swimming and everything, and all the people will cheer and I will shout at them... What do you mean I can't be queen? Nobody should be kept from being a queen if she wants to be one. It's usually just a matter of knowing the right people... ..well.... if I can't be a queen, then I'll be very rich then I will buy myself a queendom. Yes, I will buy myself a queendom and then I'll kick out the old queen and take over the whole operation myself. I will be head queen."

Brighton Beach Memoirs

By Neil Simon

Nora reminisces about her father who has passed away.

Nora

When I was six or seven Daddy always brought me home a little surprise. He'd tell me to go get it in his coat pocket. So I'd run to his coat and put my hand in and it felt as big as a tent. I wanted to crawl in there and go to sleep. And there were all these terrific things in there, like Juicy Fruit gum or Spearmint Life Savers and bits of cellophane and crumbled pieces of tobacco and pennies and rubber bands and paper clips and his grey suede gloves that he wore in the winter time. After he died, I found his coat in Mom's closet and I put my hand in the pocket. And everything was gone. It was emptied and dry cleaned and it felt cold . . . And that's when I knew he was really gone. (thinks a moment) I wish we had our own place to live. I hate being a boarder. Listen, let's make a pact . . . The first one who makes enough money promises not to spend any on herself, but saves it all to get a house for you and me and Mom. Is it a pact?

A Loss of Roses

By William Inge

A young woman recalls her first day of school.

Lila

I remember my first day at school. Mother took me by the hand and I carried a bouquet of roses, too. Mama had let me pick the loveliest roses I could find in the garden and the teacher thanked me for them. Then Mama left me and I felt kinda scared, 'cause I'd never been any place before without her; but she told me Teacher would be Mama to me at school and would treat me as nice as she did. So I took my seat with all the other kids, their faces so strange and new to me. And I started talking with a little boy across the aisle. I didn't know it was against the rules. But Teacher came back and slapped me, so hard that I cried, and I ran to the door 'cause I wanted to run home to Mama quick as I could. But teacher grabbed me by the hand and pulled me back to my seat. She said I was too big a girl to be running home to Mama and had to learn to take my punishment when I broke the rules. But I still cried. I told Teacher I wanted back my roses. But she wouldn't give them to me. She shook her finger and said, when I gave away lovely presents, I couldn't expect to get them back.....I guess I never learned that lesson very well. There's so many things I still want back.

THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK

By Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett

Anne

Look, Peter, the sky. (She looks up through the skylight.) What a lovely, lovely day! Aren't the clouds beautiful? You know what I do when it seems as if I couldn't stand being cooped up for one more minute? I think myself out. I think myself on a walk in the park where I used to go with Pim. Where the jonquils and the crocus and the violets grow down the slopes. You know the most wonderful thing about thinking yourself out? You can have it any way you like. You can have roses and violets and chrysanthemums all blooming at the same time.....it's funny.....I used to take it all for granted.....and now I've gone crazy about everything to do with nature. Haven't you?.....I wish you had a religion, Peter.....Oh, I don't mean you have to be Orthodox.....or believe in heaven and hell and purgatory and things.....I just mean some religion.....it doesn't matter what. Just to believe in something! When I think of all that's out there.....the trees.....and flowers.....and seagulls.....When I think of the dearness of you, Peter.....and the goodness of the people we know.....all risking their lives for us every day.....When I think of these good things, I'm not afraid anymore.....I find myself, and God, and I.....

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

By William Shakespeare

Helena

How happy some o'er other some can be! Through Athens I am thought as fair as she. But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so; He will not know what all but he do know: And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes, So I, admiring of his qualities: Things base and vile, folding no quantity, Love can transpose to form and dignity: Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind; And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind: Nor hath Love's mind of any judgment taste; Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste: And therefore is Love said to be a child, Because in choice he is so oft beguiled. As waggish boys in game themselves forswear, So the boy Love is perjured every where: For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eyne, He hail'd down oaths that he was only mine; And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt, So he dissolved, and showers of oaths did melt. I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight: Then to the wood will he to-morrow night Pursue her; and for this intelligence If I have thanks, it is a dear expense: But herein mean I to enrich my pain, to have his sight thither and back again.

SAINT JOAN

By George Bernard Shaw

Joan

Yes: they told me you were fools, and that I was not to listen to your fine words nor trust to your charity. You promised me my life; but you lied. You think that life is nothing but not being stone dead. It is not the bread and water I fear: I can live on bread: when have I asked for more? It is no hardship to drink water if the water be clean. Bread has no sorrow for me, and water no affliction. But to shut me from the light of the sky and the sight of the fields and flowers; to chain my feet so that I can never again ride with the soldiers nor climb the hills; to make me breathe foul damp darkness, and keep from me everything that brings me back to the love of God when your wickedness and foolishness tempt me to hate Him: all this is worse than the furnace in the bible that was heated seven times. I could do without my warhorse; I could drag about in a skirt; I could let the banners and the trumpets and the knights and soldiers pass me and leave me behind as they leave the other women, if only I could still hear the wind in the trees, the larks in the sunshine, the young lambs crying through the healthy frost, and blessed blessed church bells that send my angel voices floating to me on the wind. But without these things I cannot live; and by your wanting to take them away from me, or from any human creature, I know that your counsel is of the devil, and that mine is of God.

A Raisin in the Sun

By Lorraine Hansberry

Beneatha

Me?... Me?... Me, I'm nothing... Me. When I was very small... we used to take our sleds out in the wintertime and the only hills we had were the ice-covered stone steps of some house down the street. And we used to fill them in with snow and make them smooth and slide down them all day... and it was very dangerous you know... far too steep... and sure enough one day a kid named Rufus came down too fast and hit the sidewalk... and we saw his face just split open right there in front of us. And I remember standing there looking at his bloody open face thinking that was the end of Rufus. But the ambulance came and they took him to the hospital and they fixed the broken bones and they sewed it all up... and the next time I saw Rufus he just had a little line down the middle of his face... I never got over that. * That that was what one person could do for another, fix him up--- sew up the problem , make him all right again. That was the most marvelous thing in the world... I wanted to do that. I always thought it was the one concrete thing in the world that a human being could do. Fix up the sick, you know--- and make them whole again. This was truly being God. * No--- I wanted to cure. It used to be so important to me. I wanted to cure. It used to matter. I used to care. I mean about people and how their bodies hurt...

Mr. Principal, dear teachers, fellow graduates, and dear parents and friends. Our speaker just told us that he was improving the education facilities in Stamps. He's given us the chance to become basketball players and cooks. Well, I want to thank you Mr. Johnson for this chance, but I don't think I'm going to take it. I didn't memorize the whole of The Rape of Lucrece so I could be a cook or a cleaning lady. See, I give Mr. Johnson all the rights he wants, but I don't believe he has the right to decide that my only hero has got to be a first line football player. I got other heroes. For example, Edgar Allen Poe because like what he said, and I lied the way he said it. My teachers, because they showed me a map. And on that map, I saw that the world went past Stamps, Arkansas, United States of America, North American Continent. And I got another hero...me! And me as not just a proud member of the graduating class of The Lafayette County Training School. Me as a proud member of the Negro race, the wonderful, beautiful Negro race. Well, I'd like to thank Mr. Johnson for the paved playing fields, but I'm not gonna run on it. I got other things to do.

How to Eat Like a Child: And Other Lessons in Not Being a Grownup

By Delia Ephron

This musical comedy revue is treated like an instruction manual for children. Each song, sketch, or monologue has a title. The following monologue is called "How to Watch More television." The actor can actually recite the title prior to performing the monologue if he/she chooses. Darien was the name of the child that originally performed this piece. There is no specific age or gender assigned to this monologue. Be careful not to play it all one way. Use different tactics. Beg, negotiate, threaten, sob, flatter etc...

Darien

Please, Mom, please. Just this once. I'll only ask this once. I promise, if you let me watch this show, I'll go to bed the second it is over. I won't complain. I won't ask for a drink of water. I won't ask for anything. Please. If you let me do this, I'll never ask you for anything ever again. Never. Please, Mommy, please. You are the nicest mommy. You are the sweetest, nicest mommy. I promise I won't be cranky tomorrow. I promise I'll go to bed tomorrow at nine. Please, please, please.

(pause)

Why not! Just give me one reason. I told you I'll be good. I told you I'll go to bed. Don't you believe me? Don't you trust me? Some mom- doesn't even trust her own kid. Look, I'll just close my eyes and listen. I won't even watch it! Oh, Mom, why can't I?

Ah, the sun has broken through...I can see the woods of Montsec below...and what's that? It's a Fokker triplane! Ha! I've got you this time, Red Baron (SFX: machine gun fire) Aaugh! The Right Box

By Eleanor Harder

(A school hallway. TINA (or TOM), a high school student, stomps in angrily, carrying a paper and pen, stops, and addresses the audience.)

I'm really steamed! I have to fill out this dumb form, and it's got these little boxes that say "Caucasian," "Black," "Asian," "Native American," "South Pacific," and stuff, and I'm supposed to check which one I am. And I told the lady that, and she give me this bored look and says, (imitating) "just check the right box and bring it back to me!" The right box? I don't fit in any of them. (Grins)

I have a friend who told them she was "Blaxican," and she didn't see any box for that. Well, I could say that, too. Blaxican, I mean, "cuz I've got some black on my dad's side and Mexican on my mom's. But my dad's great-grandfather was Native American, and my mom's grandmother was Irish! So---What am I? I don't see any box her for me.

We've got this big ol' dog. Got him out of the pound when he was just a puppy. He's two now, and nobody can figure out what he is. Well, he's a mix, we know that. But a mix of what is a real mystery. He's got a lot of fur that I guess you'd call multicolored, and his tail can't decide to curl up or down, and his eyes are kind of yellowish. I'm making him sound terrible. But he's really a great looking dog. And when we took him to the vet's for his shots, the vet said so, too. He said he could have some German shepherd and collie, maybe some chow, even a little coyote in him, he wasn't sure, but he was certainly a splendid-looking dog. That's just what he said—a splendid-lookng dog. I know they call dogs that aren't purebreds "mutts." So, (shrugs) guess ours is a mutt. A splendid looking one. (Thinks.)

Then maybe people are like mutts, too? I don't think I like the sound of that. Mutts. Somewhere I read that mutts are stronger than purebreds, and they live longer, too. I don't know if that works for human mutts, but I hope so. 'Course, when I think of the people I know, or have heard about, most of them are mutts, too. Well, like, most everybody's a mix of something. So what does that mean? We're all stronger, and we'll all live longer? I don't know. (Looks at paper) Maybe I'll just write down "mutt" on this. I can just see the lady's face when I hand it in. (Grins.) Or maybe I'll make up a name just for me, like (thinks) Hmm—Native American, Irish, Black and —Nat-Am-Iri-Blaxicana. Nat-Am-Iri-Blaxicana. (Repeats in rhythm.) Nat-Am-Iri-Blaxicana. Yeah! Sounds good. A lot better than mutt. (Grins as she marks paper) There. Now that the right box! (Exits triumphantly.)

The Day My Father Died

BY CARL COHEN

In the following monologue, a boy explores his mixed emotions after the death of his father.

Carl

My father died this morning. I was in the middle of Dr. Strange when my mom told me. She said I could finish my comic but then I had to come into the living room and cry with her and my sister. It wasn't sudden or anything. I knew for a long time that he was dying. We all did. My mom tried to tell me that he was getting better, but I knew it was a lie. See, the thing is, I really didn't want him to get better. He was a much nicer person when he was sick. He didn't have the strength to hit me and he hardly ever yelled anymore. He was sent home from the hospital for a while, but there were oxygen tanks and syringes all over the house. It was getting kind of ugly so my mom had him sent back. I felt really bad for a long time because the sicker he got, the happier I became. See, he didn't just hit me, he used to beat me up pretty bad, and as he got worse and worse, I got less and less afraid of him. Sometimes, when I was by myself I even laughed, because I would look into his eyes and I knew he was afraid. I wanted him to feel the way he made me feel. You know, I really loved him a lot. Even when he was hitting me I loved him. Each time, I thought, after this, everything will be alright. But it never was. I bet he really loved me a lot too. He just didn't know how to show it.

You're a Good Man Charlie Brown

By Clark Gesner

Charlie Brown

I think lunchtime is about the worst time of day for me. Always having to sit here alone. Of course, sometimes, mornings aren't so pleasant either. Waking up and wondering if anyone would really miss me if I never got out of bed. Then there's the night, too. Lying there and thinking about all the stupid things I've done during the day. And all those hours in between when I do all those stupid things. Well, lunchtime is among the worst times of the day for me. Well, I guess I'd better see what I've got. Peanut butter. Some psychiatrists say that people who eat peanut butter sandwiches are lonely...I guess they're right. And when you're really lonely, the peanut butter sticks to the roof of your mouth. There's that cute little red-headed girl eating her lunch over there. I wonder what she would do if I went over and asked her if I could sit and have lunch with her?...She'd probably laugh right in my face...it's hard on a face when it gets laughed in. There's an empty place next to her on the bench. There's no reason why I couldn't just go over and sit there. I could do that right now. All I have to do is stand up...I'm standing up!...I'm sitting down. I'm a coward. I'm so much of a coward, she wouldn't even think of looking at me. She hardly ever does look at me. In fact, I can't remember her ever looking at me. Why shouldn't she look at me? Is there any reason in the world why she shouldn't look at me? Is she so great, and I'm so small, that she can't spare one little moment?...SHE'S LOOKING AT ME!! SHE'S LOOKING AT ME!! (he puts his lunch bag over his head.) ...Lunchtime is among the worst times of the day for me. If that little red-headed girl is looking at me with this stupid bag over my head she must think I'm the biggest fool alive. But, if she isn't looking at me, then maybe I could take it off quickly and she'd never notice it. On the other hand...I can't tell if she's looking, until I take it off! Then again, if I never take it off I'll never have to know if she was looking or not. On the other hand...it's very hard to breathe in here. (he removes his sack) Whew! She's not looking at me! I wonder why she never looks at me? Oh well, another lunch hour over with...only 2,863 to go.

The Dark at the Top of the Stairs

by William Inge

SAMMY: I always worry that maybe people aren't going to like me, when I go to a party. Isn't that crazy? Do you ever get kind of a sick feeling in the pit of your stomach when you dread things? Gee, I wouldn't want to miss a party for anything. But every time I go to one, I have to reason with myself to keep from feeling that the whole world's against me. See, I've spent almost my whole life in the military academies. My mother doesn't have a place for me, where she lives. She...she just doesn't know what else to do with me. But you mustn't misunderstand about my mother. She's really a very lovely person. I guess every boy thinks his mother is beautiful, but my mother really is. She tells me in every letter she writes how sorry she is that we can't be together more, but she has to think of her work. One time we were together, though. She met me in San Francisco once, and we were together for two whole days. She let me take her to dinner and to a show and to dance. Just like we were sweethearts. It was the most wonderful time I ever had. And then I had to go back to the old military academy. Every time I walk into the barracks, I get kind of a depressed feeling. It's got hard stone walls. Pictures of generals hanging all over...oh, they're very fine gentlemen, but they all look so kind of hard-boiled and stern...you know what I mean. Well, gee! I guess I've bored you enough, telling you about myself.

The Breakfast Club

By John Hughes

High school jock Andrew explains how he landed himself in Saturday detention--with a very surprising result.

Andy

Do you guys know what I did to get in here? I taped Larry Lester's buns together. Yeah, you know him? Well then, you know how hairy he is, right? Well, when they pulled the tape off, most of his hair came off and some skin too. And the bizarre thing is, is that I did it for my old man. I tortured this poor kid because I wanted him to think I was cool. He's always going off about, you know, when he was in school, all the wild things he used to do, and I got the feeling that he was disappointed that I never cut loose on anyone, right? So, I'm sitting in the locker room and I'm taping up my knee and Larry's undressing a couple lockers down from me and he's kinda skinny and weak, and I started thinking about my father and his attitude about weakness, and the next thing I knew I... I jumped on top of him and started wailing on him. Then my friends, they just laughed and cheered me on.

And afterwards, when I was sittin' in Vernon's office, all I could think about was Larry's father and Larry having to go home and explain what happened to him. And the humiliation, the complete humiliation he must have felt. It must have been unreal. I mean, how do you apologize for something.

Nice People Dancing to Good Country Music

Jason

You only been here a few hours. I been here all summer. He's nuts. He makes me work in his crumby business. I'm on my vacation, and he makes me push beer cases around in the back room down there. He's a creepoid jerk. Today he told me to move twenty cases of Schlitz from the front wall to the back wall, and restack 'em. It's the same twenty cases I moved from the back wall to the front wall yesterday. He can't decide where they're "the most efficient." Efficient, my roaring butt. I'm going home tomorrow---what the hell do I care where they are?!

I'm doing this work for him, and when I'm done he comes in and looks at it, and say he liked it better the other way. So I dumped three cases of Schlitz on his foot. He start screaming like crazy, and threw a bottle at my head. He could've killed me, the stupid mother. You know, that's the only thing Jim ever did I liked. Started callin me Jay Bob. Jay Bob is just as stupid a name as Jason, but at least you can claim your folks didn't know any better.

A Midsummer Night's Dream

By William Shakespeare

Bottom

[Awaking] When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer: my next is, 'Most fair Pyramus.' Heigh-ho! Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life, stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream, past the wit of man to say what dream it was: man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was--there is no man can tell what. Methought I was,. and methought I had,.. but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.
